Sample Police Report

The text below is an example of a police report. Notice the following points about it:

- It is written in clear, simple English.
- Dates, times and other details are recorded as precisely as possible.
- The "register" (level of language) is formal. For example, there are no short forms such as "didn't" and no colloquial words such as "nicked". Similarly, the formal word "purchased" is used instead of "bought".
- The report is objective. The writer focuses on the events and the evidence, not on his own thoughts or feelings.

Case Number: VT 05/04/01/3462

Incident: Vehicle Theft

Reporting Officer: Constable René Artois Date of Report: 06 February 2003

At about 1040hrs on 5 April 2001, I met with Ms. Vanessa Kahn at 61 Southside Drive regarding a vehicle theft. Ms. Kahn said she parked her car by a parking meter outside Southside Shopping Centre at about 0945 hours and went into a nearby shop to return a faulty torch she had purchased the previous day. She said that when she returned to the leisure centre at about 1000 hours, she discovered her car was missing.

Ms. Kahn described her car as metallic silver, 2008, Audi Cabriolet A4 1.8 T S-line, with black fabric roof. Registered in the UK, the car registration number is GTL-682-P. She estimated the value of the car at £19,500 and said there were no distinguishing marks or items.

Ms. Kahn told me she locked the car, but she does not have the keys. She now believes she may have left the keys in the boot lock after removing the faulty torch from the boot. Ms. Kahn said she had not given permission for anyone to take her car, and she is up to date with her loan repayments.

I conducted a survey of the crime scene but found no items of evidence. I saw no broken glass in the area, and there were no items to retrieve or photograph.

I obtained a sworn statement from Ms. Kahn and provided her with the case number and Information Leaflet 99/07 ("What to do when your car is stolen"). I entered the vehicle into the station database as a stolen vehicle. I also searched the area but was unable to find the vehicle.

Your Best Executive Summary Ever

An executive summary has basically nothing to do with product presentation, and everything to do with a persuasive sales pitch. It is far more than an abstract which merely presents the rest of the document—it's your unique opportunity to convince the reader that your solution provides the best value proposition: the best benefit at the lowest cost.

The more technical your proposal, the more important the executive summary is likely to be. Unlike the abstract, the executive summary steers clear of technicalities to instead concentrate on substantiating the benefits for the customer.

How to Write an Executive Summary

Executive Summary First

By writing your executive summary first, you ensure that the rest of your proposal will be aligned with the persuasive message you want to deliver.

Executive Summary Content

Your executive summary should contain your value proposition, which should be grasped right away by your reader. Read the discussion How to write an Executive Summary to help you identify the necessary information for laying down your value proposition through the use of "win themes."

It is highly recommended that you read the suggestions below in order to properly and successfully use the executive summary template and sample.

1. Identify 3 main benefits—no more, no less—that your executive summary will cover, putting them in descending order of importance. This is the way they will appear in your document body, since you want to grab the reader's attention as early as possible.
2. For each benefit, write a simple, declarative, and persuasive sentence by applying the S.P.A. rule for your value proposition:

Argumentative Essay Sample

The Importance of Image to Boys

Warning! Warning! Alarms go off inside your head. You're at the mall walking around with one of your best buds looking at CDs, when all of a sudden you look up and see this drop dead gorgeous girl, whose looking at CDs in the next aisle. You grasp the CD case you were looking at firmly, and use the reflection quickly to make sure none of your pimples are ready to burst, and that your hair is fixed right. You take a breath and look up. She gives looks at you out of the corner of your eyes and you feel a skip in you chest. She looked at you!

That was only a brief glimpse into the complicated life of a teenage boy. A boy who reads magazines, wants a car, plays video games, and watches a lot of TV. His ultimate goal is to look as good and cool as possible, like those guys in the Gap commercials on TV, with their perfect smiles and their arm always around that really hot girl.

Why have we as males become more concerned about our looks and body? It seemed that only twenty years ago it was just the girls really worrying about their make up and nails, but times are changing. Changing for the worst.

Most of the men and guys on TV and in magazines look good or have good bodies. They most likely wear the clothes that are in style. In the movies, these guys often get the girl or are the hero of the picture. As of late, shows such as Friends and The Real World – shows where the relationships are shallow and mostly based on looks – have become more and more popular. A lot of times the reasons that they dump a guy are because he needs to lose fat around some areas.

Shows like these only make guys more self-conscious about their looks because they think that the girls expect us to be a rippling Arnold Schwarzenegger with a perfect body. A lot of times we also think they want us to look like the guys in the Mark and Spencer's ads, holding a hot girl. What they're really saying is, 'Hey guys! Look like me even though you probably won't be able to. If you do though, you'll get lots of hot girls. This puts a lot of pressure on having 'in' clothes and being cool.

Another source that has altered the male thinking is the magazine. Because girl magazines, like Cosmopolitan, encourages women use the power to choose and be ahead of the relationship, it also places stress on guys to look better for girls.

These magazines are read by a majority of the male population, and anything that gets published in them is sent out to a couple million males. A couple of million. The opinions stated in these magazines therefore become public opinion. Both magazines and the television have had a big effect on why we as males are more concerned about our looks now, then fifty years ago. The real struggle is to not let these materials conflict with what we really know. What we consider important. What we really value.

When you consider it in the long run, these things do not matter: popularity, money, and what you do. Focus more on what matters, like relationships that are not based on whether your hair looks good, or if your face is clear of acne.

The Weekend Market

Many tourists I have met have told me that one place they have to go is the weekend market. This market is huge and has everything from bags, souvenirs and handicrafts to many kinds of animals, many kinds of plants and it also has a variety of local food. 1. _____, the weekend market is a great place for shopping and experiencing the local culture.

The market is located near the city's main bus station so people come from all over the country to buy and sell goods. 2. _____, it is also near a sky train station and a subway station which makes it very convenient for city people, especially young people who don't have cars. The market is very large and full of hundreds of small shops and stalls. 3. _____, it can be confusing to get around. 4. _____, if you get lost, it is a good idea to look for the clock tower which is right in the middle of the market. It will help you find your way.

When I walk into the market early on a Sunday morning there are people and cars and motorcycles everywhere. You have to be careful where you walk. Many people are bringing their goods to sell in big bags on carts and trolleys. 5. _____, you might even have to jump out of the sellers' way as they charge along the narrow walkways with their goods. 6. _____ to the sellers, tourists and locals are pouring in looking for something to eat or ready to start shopping. 7. _____, the market gets more and more crowded and you have to start squeezing past people to keep moving.

As you walk through the market you will experience many sensations. 8. _____, there are many smells, scents and aromas. One moment you will be smelling the aromas of stir-fried cooking dishes from a small restaurant and the next you smell the scents of orchids and other flowers as you pass through the cooler and more relaxing garden section. 9. _____, walking deeper into the market, your eyes will have trouble recording so many products with their many colors, designs and sizes. After a while you may feel dizzy and look for a quiet place to have a rest and a refreshing drink. 10. _____, there are many small cafes and drink stalls selling fresh coconut juice, orange juice or iced water.

11. _____, a day at the weekend market is both a day of shopping and a unique experience for your senses. It is a kind of magical journey that is great as a first experience for tourists and an escape from daily life for locals. 12. _____ while it is usually hot and crowded, the atmosphere is friendly and good-natured.

One way to approach this essay is to make a grid for yourself that compares or contrasts two items before you start writing. The second body paragraph can contain your weakest point, because the third body paragraph can, and should, support another strong argument. Concluding Paragraph Tips Your concluding paragraph is important, and can be difficult. Minor inconveniences include mosquitoes and ants. The first sentence should be a so-called hook sentence and grabs the reader. This is the sentence that will keep your readers reading. Each family member's sleeping bag has been touching the sides of the tent. An encounter between an unwary camper and a surprised snake can prove to be fatal. When you get ready to write longer papers, remember that the job of the introduction and conclusion are just the same as they are in the five-paragraph essay. Another problem likely to be faced during a camping trip is run-ins with wildlife, which can range from mildly annoying to dangerous. If an effective repellent is not used, the camper can spend an interminable night scratching, which will only worsen the itch. If the sleeping bags happen to get wet, the cold also becomes a major factor. Draw them in. What Makes a Thesis Statement The last sentence should be your thesis statement, which is the argument you are going to make in the essay. Ants do not usually attack campers, but keeping them out of the food can be quite an inconvenience. Although these insects cause minor discomfort, some wildlife encounters are potentially dangerous. Examples of hook sentences include a quote, a joke, a rhetorical question or a shocking fact. More than likely, equipment will continue to malfunction. A tent is only waterproof if the sides are not touched. It is the sentence that contains the main point of the essay, or what you are trying to prove. Their sleeping bag zippers have gotten caught. When hiking in the woods, the camper must be careful where he steps. Snakes, searching for either shade from the sun or shelter from the rain, can enter a tent. Nothing can dampen the excited anticipation of camping more than a dark, rainy day. This includes keeping the inside of the tent dry and free from mud, getting the sleeping bags situated dryly, and protecting food from the downpour. Do not try to write about both. Outline of this essay: Introduction about camping, with three main points and thesis statement Body bad weather wildlife equipment failures Conclusion reviewing three main points and thesis statement Enjoying Your Camping Trip Each year, thousands of people throughout the United States choose to spend their vacations camping in the great outdoors. Contrasting two items is to show how they are different. You might write a different paragraph on that other point, but you may not stick it into any old paragraph just because you thought of it at that point. Keys to Introductory Paragraphs Any introductory paragraph contains from three to five sentences and sets up the tone and structure for the whole essay. It should answer the question: So what? It is wise to check the weather forecast before embarking on camping trips; however, mother nature is often unpredictable and there is no guarantee bad weather will be eluded. Then, write about those characteristics. If you have made similar arguments multiple times, join these together in one sentence. Essentially, in the concluding or fifth paragraph, you should restate what your preceding paragraphs were about and draw a conclusion. They arrive at the campsite at night and haphazardly set up their nine-person tent. Perhaps the least serious camping troubles are equipment failures; these troubles often plague families camping for the first time. Combining wind with rain can cause frigid temperatures, causing any outside activities to be delayed. Ideally, you can begin by restating your thesis. The swarming of mosquitoes can literally drive annoyed campers indoors. These sentences, at least four of them, will explain your topic sentence to your reader. Finally, after fifteen minutes of struggling, they free themselves, only to realize another problem. The other sentences in this paragraph should be general information that links the first sentence and the thesis. CC0/jane13/Pixabay The five-paragraph essay is one of the most common composition assignments out there, whether for high school or college students. These skills are useful not only for classroom assignments and college application essays, but even in the business world, as employees have to write memorandums and reports, which draw on the same skills. Often, that conclusion is to agree with you, and who doesn't like to be right? Then you can recall or restate all three to five of your supporting arguments. If you have a point to make that is not directly connected to the topic sentence, it does not belong in the paragraph. It can be a confusing one due to the terms used. Sleepily, they awake and proceed to set up the tent in the rain. The thesis statement is usually only one sentence and is made up of the topic, focus, and three main points of the essay. Content of Supporting Paragraphs Each of the next three paragraphs follows the same general structure of the introductory paragraph. The name of the essay is actually misleading. Keep these pointers in mind when you need to write a five-paragraph essay, and your end result will be clear in its argument, leading your reader to the right conclusion. Sometime during the night the family is awakened by a huge crash. More than a few campers have had their tents blown down because of the wind, which once again begins the frustrating task of "setting up camp" in the downpour. Print this handout by clicking here for download. Even if the answer seems obvious to you, write it down so that your reader can continue to easily follow your thinking process, and hopefully, agree with you. A Note on Compare and Contrast Let's look a little more closely at the compare-and-contrast essay, which is a very common assignment. Each one of them should define and defend your thesis sentence in the introduction. The first body paragraph should be dedicated to proving your most powerful point. Also, the tent must never be left open. Extreme care must be taken not to leave food out before or after meals. In addition to swarming the food, ants inside a tent can crawl into sleeping bags and clothing. Depending on an individual's sense of adventure, there are various types of camping to choose from, including log cabin camping, recreational vehicle camping, and tent camping. Even the most adventurous campers can lose some of their enthusiasm on the drive to the campsite if the skies are dreary and damp. Whatever the case, use the following guidelines to strengthen your knowledge of this preliminary essay format. Mastering the five-paragraph essay is doable, and here are some tips. Components of a Good Essay The five-paragraph essay lives up to its name, because it has five paragraphs, as follows: an introductory paragraph that includes a thesis, three body paragraphs, each which includes support and development, and one concluding paragraph. Its structure sometimes generates other names for the same essay, including three-tier essay, one-three-one, or a hamburger essay. There are many poisonous snakes in the United States, such as the water moccasin and the diamond-back rattlesnake. Then, the first sentence should continue with your topic sentence. The tent has fallen down. You should summarize each main point. It is a classic assignment because it presents an arena in which writers can demonstrate their command of language and punctuation, as well as their logic and rhetorical skills. Until some brilliant scientist invents a weather machine to control bad weather or a kind of wildlife repellent, unlucky campers will continue to shake their fists in frustration. In the morning, everyone emerges from the tent, except for two. Be sure that each sentence in the paragraph directly addresses both your topic sentence and your thesis statement. If food is stored inside the tent, the tent must never be left open. The topic sentence tells your reader what the paragraph is about, like a smaller-level thesis statement. Five-paragraph essays are incredibly useful in two situations — when writers are just starting out and when a writing assignment is timed. The restatement of the thesis is a simpler form than the one originally presented in the introduction. Each body paragraph should start with a transition — either a word or phrase, like First, or Another important point is. This paragraph brings the essay to a close, reminds the reader of the basic ideas from the essay, and restates the thesis statement. Think of the five-paragraph essay as just that. That is, they have one introduction sentence, evidence and arguments in three to five sentences, and a conclusion. (You can't stick a red towel into a load of white laundry without causing damage to the rest of the clothes, and you can't stick a point that's off-topic into a paragraph without doing damage to the rest of the essay. Even with the best planning, however, tent camping can be an extremely frustrating experience due to uncontrolled factors such as bad weather, wildlife encounters, and equipment failures. These three types of camping troubles can strike campers almost anywhere. An outline is often used to demonstrate the content of most five-paragraph essays: Introduction Body First Point Second Point Third Point Conclusion Before we finish, it is important to remember that the format of the five-paragraph essay is the foundation of nearly every other essay you'll write. Keep your laundry and your paragraph points separate!) The conclusion is the last paragraph of the essay. A sleeping bag usually provides warmth on a camping trip; a wet sleeping bag provides none. You should be able to look back at it to keep your argument focused. Even so, camping continues to be a favorite pastime of people all across the United States. They then settle down for a peaceful night's rest. The five-paragraph essay has three basic parts: introduction, body, and conclusion. The rest of the paragraph will be made of supporting sentences. Run-ins can range from unpleasant to dangerous, but the camper must realize that they are sometimes inevitable. The introduction is the first paragraph of the essay, and it serves several purposes. Below is an example of a 5-paragraph essay. Of these, tent camping involves "roughing it" the most, and with proper planning the experience can be gratifying. After reaching their destination, campers must then "set up camp" in the downpour. If you want camping to be a happy experience for you, learn to laugh at leaky tents, bad weather, and bugs, or you will find yourself frustrated and unhappy. Whether you are writing a cause-and-effect essay, a persuasive essay, an argumentative essay or a compare-and-contrast essay, you should use this same structure and the following specifics. The sleeping bags and clothing are all drenched. MORE FROM LIFE123.COM When it comes to writing essays in college, we all need a place to start. Even inside the tent problems may arise due to heavy winds. This paragraph gets your reader's attention, develops the basic ideas of what you will cover, and provides the thesis statement for the essay. Totally disillusioned with the "vacation," the frustrated family packs up immediately and drives home. Notice how the essay follows the outline. It should be your strongest claim in the whole essay, telling the reader what the paper is about. Equipment failures may not seem very serious, but after campers encounter bad weather and annoying pests or wild animals, these failures can end any remaining hope for a peaceful vacation. The conclusion should not contain new ideas, as it is the summation of the content of the essay. Some students may find this to be a simple process, while others may spend a greater amount of time understanding this basic building block of college writing. Comparing two items is to show how they are alike. Also, when you write longer papers, change your idea of support from three body paragraphs to three (or two or four) body sections, with as many paragraphs as necessary in each section (just as you had as many sentences you needed in each body paragraph).
